

GNU/Linux Club

Terms of Service

All GNU/Linux Club (hereafter ‘The Club’) home server members are individually responsible for being in full compliance with the Terms of Service (hereafter ‘The Agreement’) stated herein.

The services provided by the GNU/Linux Club and the Terms of Service that govern those services, and the associated use of the club’s spaces and channels, pertain to both outside and home server members. The club is a matrix server, and is an official instance of the Public GNU/Linux Users Group. The Admin Team is comprised of the pubglug founders and personnel.

1. Rights & Property

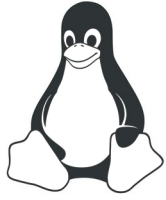

Outside and home server members of the club shall not post, re-post, or otherwise link content that infringes on the rights and/or property of other members in the community and/or in the fediverse.

2. Release of Liability

Outside and home server members of the club release the club from any and all liability, from any form of harm acquired from the community and/or from the club, and/or from other grievances perceived by other members in the community and/or in the fediverse generally.

These Terms of Service are licensed as CC BY-SA 4.0 . This means you are allowed to create your own derivative works so long as you also give attribution to the creator, Haack’s Networking.

3. Enforcement

The club's admin team reserves the right to enforce adherence to these Terms of Service and to thereby deactivate any account - at will - who violates this agreement in part or in whole.

4. Invalid Accounts

GNU/Linux Club reserves the right to remove and/or deactivate inactive, spam, and/or bot accounts without warning and without the possibility to restore them.

5. Home Server Requirements

The club is public and available for home server registration so long as members agree to the following terms:

Home Server Members must provide an introduction within 1 hour containing:

- your reason for joining the club as home server*
- your experience level with GNU/Linux*
- you must provide some form of validation such as but not exclusive to a gitlab/github profile, your tech blog, a presentation of yours, public work you've done, or an employee listing, etc.*

Engagement and Activity Level

- Home server members must remain in and stay active in the pubglug channel*
- Home server members are responsible for staying up to date and compliant with the agreement, including any changes made after their acceptance*

These Terms of Service are licensed as CC BY-SA 4.0 . This means you are allowed to create your own derivative works so long as you also give attribution to the creator, Haack's Networking.

6. General Purpose and Discussion Parameters

The club exists to provide a community forum and discussion space for those dedicated to the use of GNU/Linux and the principles of the Free Software movement.

The club membership is united in wanting to discuss and learn about Free Software, including the implementation and technical details of software/hardware, and the surrounding political and ethical implications that come with supporting user freedom.

GNU/Linux Club works on the premise that all ideas are worthy of discussion if a shared respect and courtesy for one another is maintained. Critical questions and thought partnering, and minority dissent, only serve to empower and make communities stronger.

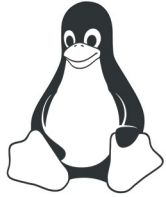

7. Behavioral Expectations

The following behavioral expectations are in place for home server members and the public:

- targeted harassment and/or abuse of members, incitations to violence of any form, either in space channels or DMs, is prohibited*
- any form of hate and or hateful language as determined by the pubplug founders and admin team, is prohibited*
- no automated cross posting to pubplug spaces from Twitter, RSS, or other services, spam, self-promotion for business or monetary gain or use of spammy bots, or other heinous tools*
- impersonating someone in name/avatar is not permitted*
- provide alt-text for images/media, and content warnings for sensitive posts is strongly encouraged*

These Terms of Service are licensed as CC BY-SA 4.0 . This means you are allowed to create your own derivative works so long as you also give attribution to the creator, Haack's Networking.

GNU/Linux Club

- challenging the community with critical ideas and good thought partnering is welcome, ass holes are not - be respectful during dialogue or debate
- accounts which engage in promoting proprietary software and/or hardware and/or the surrounding licensing and/or culture are prohibited
- any behaviors in violation of US federal law and/or NMAC are prohibited

8. Filing Complaints and/or Reporting Abuse

Please message the admin team at @haacksnetworking:gnulinix.club if you witness or experience:

- home server members violating the club's agreement in the club spaces and channels
- home server members violating the club's agreement in other spaces and channels in the fediverse
- members from other home servers that violate the club's agreement inside the club's spaces and channels
- members from any server that send messages while impersonating and/or falsely representing the club's members, spaces, or channels

The Admin Team will address each complaint as professionally and as quickly as possible. Please note that mere differences of opinion, however divergent, are not considered grounds for a complaint. The Founders and Admin Team are the final arbiters of what constitutes compliance with this Agreement.

The club's admin team is the final arbiter of what constitutes acceptable behavior according to the agreement.

10. Server, Data, and Maintainer Information

This matrix instance is located on a Xeon SuperMicro running a Debian-based custom virtualization stack using virsh+qemu. The hardware running this stack is owned and maintained by Haack's Networking and co-located at the Brown Rice Data Center in Taos, NM. All data are encrypted with regular backups and/or version control. Self-hosted and co-located solutions involve periodic down time and take patience and time to solve; community members should plan accordingly.
